Nicole: EMERGENCY INTERVENTION

People stared in disbelief as a painfully thin Nicole Richie struck poses on the red carpet at an LA event on April 24. "Her arms were so skinny," says an eyewitness. "She was trying to hide her body by wearing a loose dress, but it didn't work. Everyone was worried." Chief among them are Nicole's loved ones. With her weight plummeting (dietitian Lisa DeFazio suspects the 5-foot-1 star has dropped a whopping 26 pounds and now weighs just 87 pounds), friends and family have stepped in to try to save Nicole's life. "Her best friend staged an intervention several weeks ago to beg Nicole to start eating healthy and get help from a professional," says a source close to the mom of two, adding that the plan backfired when the 32-year-old's father, Lionel, was a no-show due to an unbreakable commitment. "So many of her issues come from wanting [Lionel's] approval and support." Nicole - who first sought treatment for her weight back in 2006, admitting that she got "too thin" because of stress - could be reverting "to a previous eating disorder to cope with issues in [her] life," warns LA psychologist Dr. Yvonne Thomas (who hasn't treated Nicole). Friends hope she'll admit she's struggling soon so she can get help. "Things have gotten so bad," says the source. "She's on a serious downward spiral."
