On May 26, Taylor Swift, 25, and boyfriend Calvin Harris, 31, stepped out for pizza at L'asso in NYC's Little Italy. But their date was anything but laid-back. Twelve hours before Taylor and Calvin arrived, "The restaurant received a call at 10:30 a.m. that Taylor would be dining there in the evening," says an insider. Nothing wrong with giving the restaurant a heads-up — but then things got weird. In a move that seems more suited for the president of the United States and the Secret Service, Taylor sent an advance security team! "At 4 p.m., her security crew swung by to survey the venue," the insider says. When the couple finally showed up, they split a gluten-free pie, and fellow diners were thrilled. "People were staring and straining to hear what they were saying to each other," says one. "It was crazy."

GAGA'S SHEDDING FOR THE WEDDING!

Like many brides-to-be, Lady Gaga is shaping up before her big day. As Life & Style has reported, Gaga, 29, plans to wed fiancé Taylor Kinney, 33, in a beachy summer bash in Malibu. Gaga's really been working it — popping up at a SoulCycle in Chicago, pounding a punching bag and strengthening her core at yoga sessions. All that work is paying off. When she took the stage at the Jazz & Heritage Festival in New Orleans in April, the 5-foot-1 singer "looked like she weighed 160 pounds," observes nutritionist Lisa DeFazio. But remarkably, just one month later, on May 25, "It looks like she's pared down to 135 pounds!"
